SATURDAY, SEPT. 7, 1889

Four tramps, arrested in Moberly, Mo., for vagrancy, were sold at public auction. Two of them were bought by farmers at $2 a head, another was bid in for 75 cents, the fourth could find no purchaser.

A suggestion is made that at the proposed World's Fair in 1892 a fleet sail from Spain, visit San Salvador, and the exhibition be opened by the baby king, setting in motion the machinery through the means of an electric button.

There is hardly a month in the year that wheat is not cut in some part of the world. Australia leads off, her harvest beginning at the very opening of the year, India follows in March, America in June to August, and Europe in August and September.

The Archbishop of Canterbury is shocked at the idea of a bridegroom taking part in a wedding ceremony in evening dress. Such a costume, he thinks, desecrates the sanctuary, and he has issued an edict against issuing of licenses for a later hour than 5 o'clock in the evening.

A war of races in the Southern states, it is evident, can only be avoided by the exercise of the most judicious and discreet action of those in authority. It will require lofty statesmanship, and sagacious counsel, to temper the antagonisms that menace the stability of society in that section of our country.

CLAUS SPRECKELS, the famous sugar man of San Francisco says, that he has discovered a process by which beet sugar can be hardened to the consistency of marble, and that it will stand the wear and tear of time and the elements as well as stone. He proposes the building of an addition to the White House out of pure white sugar.

According to reliable authority in financial affairs, business in all parts of the country continues to improve, with the stimulus of large crops. The monetary pressure has been reduced to some extent and the interior money market are well supplied, the lack of supply for commercial purposes existing principally in the Eastern cities.

GEORGE FRANCIS TRAIN, for 140 days abstained from all food with the exception, during the last sixty days, of a daily ration of two cups of chocolate and a little fruit. He says that he found the greatest sustaining powers in berries, and now that the berry season is over he feels faint. Despite his fasting, he has grown stout.

QUEEN Victoria prorogued parliament and referred in her speech to the fact, that nothing has happened to diminish her confidence, that the peace of Europe will remain unbroken, but did not allude to the strikes in her kingdom, the greatest and most threatening demonstration of workmen the world has ever known.

A young woman threw herself from a pier in San Francisco into the Bay, evidently with the intention of ending her life, some two weeks since. She was rescued, much against her will, and conveyed to the Receiving Hospital. She has from that time obstinately refused to take nourishment of any kind, and it was necessary to force beef tea down her throat, against her violent resistance. Her determination is apparently to die of starvation. She refuses to talk or to notice any one.

AFTER the experience of a court in Tranton, Missouri, it is safe to say that no more experiment will be tried by it, in selecting "truly good" men to serve on the jury panel. On a trial there for murder, a minister of the gospel was among the jurors drawn to try the case. The crime was a peculiar cold blooded one, was proven beyond a doubt, and eleven of the jury voted at once to convict.

the accused. The reverend juror held out resolutely. He did not deny the guilt of the prisoner, but wanted to acquit him, so that he could be reformed. A severe blow to the chariot theory, that the jury system would be improved by limiting the choice of jurors to the virtuous and sanctified.

U. S. OFFICERS have arrested a couple at Meadville, Pa., under a rigid interpretation of the postal law. A daring adventurer, Sarah Hitchcock, eloped when 16 years old, was deserted, and by means of an advertisement married a weak minded youth, the son of a prosperous farmer. The elder Hitchcock soon wearied of her extravagance and abetted by him she advertised for a husband, sending out her pictures to hundreds, and collected considerable money, until she was jailed with her father in law for using the mails to promote fraud.

The credulity of people is as great regarding Montezuma's fabled treasures said to be hidden, as in the fiction of Kidd's hidden riches. In a suburban town of Mexico, excavations are being made, with the object of recovering quantities of gold and jewels, supposed to have been buried by Montezuma at the time of the Spanish conquest. One of the Emperor's lineal descendants, says he has hieroglyphic documents which convince him that it was in that locality, that Montezuma hid the treasure, which is valued at $80,000,000.

WITHIN the past few days, the government has purchased nearly $11,000,000 of bonds, paying out about $14,000,000. This fact, gives rise to the allegation that an attempt is fostered to set up a corner in bonds, and force them on the Treasury at a higher price than the normal level of the market warrants. It is not impossible that a movement of the kind has been projected but if so, the object has been simply to embarrass the administration of the department. Well informed men know that the Secretary of the Treasury is not buying bonds from necessity, because there are no bonds due now and will not be for two years.

SEVEN cities of Greece vied with each other in claiming the enviable distinction of being the birthplace of Homer. Four opulent American cities are assiduously contending for the honor of being selected as the site of the national exposition in 1892. The prize is as worthy of honest competition, as was the glory of the city that gave birth to the Grecian bard. But there is the eternal fitness of things to be considered, and the voice of the people will not be mute in requiring such conditions as are practical in the selection of the most available and desirable place for holding the World's Fair. New York has entered the contest with enthusiasm, and a formidable array of millionaires has been chosen to take immediate measures for grasping the coveted trust. It is a great commercial city, enormously wealthy and attractive, but it has little national spirit and no national enterprise. Washington city is a beautiful capital but lacks the essentials necessary to entertain the vast multitudes that are sure of draining its resources. St. Louis is stately, rich and mighty in its wealth, commerce and manufactures. But it is slow and antiquated in its haughty conservatism. Chicago is pre-eminently the spot, where should be gathered together the pilgrim from all parts of the globe, with the display of the achievements of the genius, enterprise and industry of the world. Queen of the lakes, those vast estuaries that can float the fleet and commerce of the world; the center of the greatest network of railroads in existence; magnificently built up with structures that are marvelous in their architectural triumphs; hotels that are monumental in their conception, adapted to the comfort of untold numbers without even crowding them; parks and gardens that invite the pleasure seeker to a restful diversion from the tumult and noise of thronged avenues; libraries and innumerable places of amusement, museums of art and curiosities. But above all, Chicago is a representative American city, bustling with energy, active life and stupendous public works, American pluck and American ideas are embodied there to a greater extent than in any other city in the union, and designate that city as the most appropriate for the World's Fair.

Sheep in Arizona.
The breed in sheep in this Territory is not often changed, as it is proven, that the French-American merinos are best adapted to this climate. Sheep owners will in the near future increase, as the comparative profits as between sheep and cattle are about 50 per cent in favor of the former, they paying 33 1/2 per cent per annum, while the latter only pay 16 2/3 per cent annually. No disease attacks sheep here, excepting a little scab which can be easily cured. If breeders, owners and others interested will see that no ring waste, top, etc., gets into our markets, and that the present policy of the Treasury Department be continued the industry will prosper. Wool was in 1898 a drag on the market, only twelve cents per pound being realized, until a turn occurred last Fall, when wool went up one or two cents per pound. Since the ruling of the New York and Philadelphia custom officers it has made another raise of two to three cents per pound, showing a prospect for further advance in sheep husbandry in the future.
